Masters of Social Work Program

Teaching

Courses (* with coordination of multiple sections).

- International Conversations (SWK 4803), 2009. Special studies: Culture, power and the nation-state. Engaging with concepts of cultural competence, multiculturalism and citizenship, transnational issues and Aboriginal realities –incl. teleconferences with (1) University of Mainz, Germany, program in transnational social work; (2) Institute of Health & Welfare Policy, National Yang Ming University, Taipei.
- *Processes of Social Exclusion, Marginalization and Resistance** (SWK 4306) (2006, 2007, 2008). Core theory course, Social Justice & Diversity Cluster.
- Intersecting Narratives: Self, Institution and the Larger Context- Special Studies, became elective (SWK 4801, SWK 4630) (2001, 2003, 2004, 2006, 2008, 2012). Practice-research course I developed. Examines the relevance of social constructionism, the self-narrative, collective memory, cultural and socially shared narratives, critical institutional discourse, and narrative practice in family therapy.
- Social Policy in the Canadian Context (SWK 4102). One section, 2006, 2007. Specific. environmental policy; Québec policy on poverty and child-care; social policy and transnational realities.
- Advanced Social Work Practice with Individuals (SWK 4614S). (1993, 1995, 1999). In my section developed the therapeutic conversation and its variation across practice frameworks, and included considerations of the institutional setting and its shaping of the conversation.
- Social Work Practice with Individuals and Families (SWK 4601S)*. (1996) Multi-section course, coordination of the core components. I drew from my research on the therapeutic dialogue in class exercises.

- Knowledge and Values (SWK 4101F)*. Taught one section of a multi-section course. (1998-2000). Contributed to content development, and some of the pedagogical formats, the aim being to addressing knowledge from multiple perspectives. Emphasized reflexivity.
- Theoretical Foundations of Social Work (SWK 4106F)*. One section of a multi-section course. I developed the substantive areas of 'empowerment' and postmodernism. In my section I explored a historical perspective on the development of theory in social work, tracing the transformation of theoretical frameworks over time. (1993-1995).
- Qualitative Research Methods (SWK 4501)*, one section of a multi-section course, the group functions as a team which I coordinate. I bring in some more phenomenology, narrative and critical discourse content (2000-2003)
- Qualitative Research Modules: Phenomenology; Narrative & Discourse Analysis (4507) One section of multi-section semester course. I explored the insider vs. critical outsider perspectives to research. I developed a set of social phenomenology steps of exploration examining personal, cultural and institutional meanings. (Winter 2000).
- Research Methodology and Design Thesis (SWK 4508Y-4509H). Year-long course, with autonomous course sections around the development of a research proposal. In my section, I developed an interpretive and social constructionist syllabus. Students conducted a pilot study to ground their thesis proposal. (1991-1993, 1994-1995; 1996-1997, 1998-1999).
- Critical Appraisal of Research (SWK 4507F) One section of a multi-section course, with structured assessment of research. I developed the interpretive dimensions of the course (1991-1993).
